

Remembering Justice Sutherland

A long-lost portrait of the only Utahn ever to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court was presented to federal court officials in Salt Lake City Friday afternoon. The portrait of Justice George Sutherland, who died at age 80 in 1942, is displayed by federal Judges Aldon J. Anderson, A. Sherman Christensen, Bruce S. Jenkins, David K. Winder and Monroe G. McKay. The Sutherland portrait was discovered recently in an obscure part of the Federal Courthouse in Denver. Through the efforts of McKay, a U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals judge, the painting was brought to Utah. McKay said the public is entitled to enjoy this part of its history, so the Appeals Court formally gave it to the U.S. District Court for Utah. In a brief ceremony, McKay cited Sutherland's connections with Utah as a student, lawyer, politician and public official. The portrait will hang outside the courtroom where Anderson, as the Utah court's senior judge, presides. Sutherland was the only Supreme Court judge since the 1790s who had not been born in the United States. He was born in England in 1862, but his father, a Scottish lawyer, settled in Springville in 1863.

birds abound at the Willow Park Zoo.

Zoo promoters asked the Legislature to provide $100,000 — about 7 percent of the Hogle Zoo budget, since the counties served by the Logan zoo comprise about 7 percent of the state's population.

Daines said Logan would still provide a third of the total budget.

The state money would be used primarily to upgrade existing facilities, said Ray Hugie, city engineer. "The pens, pathways and things like that are getting pretty run down," he said.

Regardless of the prospects for a state appropriation, the zoo's personnel are adept at making do with what they have or salvaging second-hand equipment, Wilhelm said. They also take advantage of private donations. Fresh produce that has outlived its shelf life but is still palatable is donated by three major grocery stores in Logan. Several new aviaries were donated last year by Pepperidge Farm.

Efforts to get state funding were dealt a blow Thursday when the Utah House passed a bill to appropriate $1.5 million for Hogle Zoo only after the sponsor agreed to amend it to exclude Willow Park Zoo from funding. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Daines said he sent letters Thursday to all legislators, asking $100,000 for Willow Park Zoo be included.

"I reminded them that two years ago legislation was passed providing for a study of funding of the two zoos, and this year the joint interim committee recommended they both be funded," he said.

"The Wasatch Front communities are interested only in Hogle Zoo, but we have the second-largest zoo in the state," said Daines, who once unsuccessfully tried to get the city to abandon the Willow Park Zoo.
